

8th NHG ANNUAL SCIENTIFIC CONGRESS 2009

presents

Career Development Workshop (Clinical Research)

17 October 2009 | 1330 - 1700 hours | MR314, Level 3 Suntec Convention Centre

Synopsis

This workshop will focus on the key ingredients needed to develop career as a Clinician Investigator/Scientist based on the experience of the presenters. Questions to be addressed include the following:

How does one develop a long term career development strategy when one needs shorter-term, fundable projects that make major contributions? What is the role of "opportunistic" vs "strategic" research career planning? How does one develop questions and subsequent proposals that have the highest theoretical or practical impact? What is needed in terms of didactic training, mentored research experiences, biostatistical or other quantitative collaborations, management skills, or clinical and administrative infrastructure support to succeed? What kind of multi disciplinary team is needed? Where can one find help? Can one have such a career when patient demands are so high? When time is so short? How does one work with biostatistical, epidemiological or other quantitative experts? This interactive seminar (limited to 30 people) will discuss these issues.
